ARKANSAS RELIEF CUT OFF

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

FOR whatever it was worth, a Hope delegation went to Little Rock Thursday night to support the Hall sales tax bill at a public hearing before the revenue and taxation committee of the House of Representatives. O. A. Graves, Governor Futrell's campaign manager, made an impressive plea for the fulfillment of promises made by members of the legislature and the governor during the 1934 campaign that Arkansas' public school problem would be solved. If "public hearings" really decided policies of government, all would be well—but I rather think that our Hope delegation came home with an oppressive feeling that they were talking to a row of tin soldiers whom nothing would move until the right politician pulled the right control.

Only Slim Chance for Sales Tax in the Lower House

School Rally Leaves Revenue Committee Still Opposed

GRAVES IS SPEAKER

Futrell's Campaign Manager Appears in Behalf of Sales Tax

LITTLE ROCK—The House Revenue and Taxation Committee listened disinterestedly Thursday night to more than three hours of discussion on the Hall sales tax bill, giving proponents and opponents of the measure another opportunity to state their case on which members of the committee seem already to have made up their minds, and then adjourned until Friday night without taking any action.

Seven of the eight members of the committee present said the committee would meet briefly and vote to report the bill back to the house with the recommendation that it not be passed or that it be passed with Representative Nyberg's amendment striking the enacting clause.

The eighth member of the committee, the only one to express himself as favorable to the bill, said the committee might return a majority-minority report, but that he was convinced a majority of the committee was opposed to passage of the bill. He predicted that 80 per cent of the house also would vote in opposition to the bill.

Seven members of the committee, which has a membership of 13, signed Nyberg's amendment when it was presented Tuesday night. The amendment would kill the bill.

A crowd of several hundred gathered in the ballroom at the Hotel Marion, and a majority of those present favored the bill. A comparatively small group representing towns in eastern Arkansas offered arguments in opposition to its bill.

Time Limitation Ignored

Time for argument was divided equally between proponents and opponents, each being allowed an hour, but the limitation was disregarded. After the names of those who were to speak were furnished the committee, the legislators lost interest in the proceedings. Advocates of the bill began the delegation from eastern Arkansas and members of the latter group, in turn, flayed the sales tax bill and the "school crowd."

Speakers for the bill were: Dr. C. O. Brannen, acting dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Arkansas; Mrs. Scott Wood of Hot Springs, president of the Arkansas Congress of Parents and Teachers; Dr. N. Hill of Charleston, attorney; Dr. R. Teeter of Pottsville, Pope county; O. A. Graves of Hope, attorney; Dr.

TURNER HIGH MAN

Large Crowd on Hand for Beginning of District Play

Favorites emerged with honors in the first round of the district 10 senior boys basketball tournament Thursday night at the high school gymnasium here.

Texarkana handed Bradley a 41-to-18 lacing in the opening battle. Hope High School Bobcats eliminated Walkerville, last year's champions, by a decisive margin, 38 to 18, in the second game.

Led by Turner and Reese, Hope forwards, the Bobcats took an early lead which they never relinquished. Walkerville presented a fast-breaking team, but was unable to find the basket, frequently making long and desperate shots.

Turner accounted for 13 points. Reese made 11. Camp, Walkerville center, led his team with seven points. Rushing, Walkerville forward, went out in the second period with four personal fouls.

England and Stone for Hope played a great defensive game. Kennedy at center, also turned in a strong defensive game.

The opening games were witnessed by a large crowd. The balance of the tournament will be played Friday and Saturday.

Seven Tourneys Start

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—With the state senior tournament just one week off, seven district tournaments will be played this week-end to determine teams eligible to enter the state event to be held at Harrison.

Five district sessions already have been completed, and the seven tournaments Friday and Saturday will wind up the winners of first and second places in the district tournaments. The winners are eligible for the Harrison tournament.

With Hot Springs and Little Rock the odds-on favorites, the sixth district tournament swings into action at North Little Rock at 1 p. m. Friday.

Other district holding competition this week-end are:

District 2, at Harrison; district 3, at Searcy; district 4, at Trumman; district 5, at Wynne; district 9, at Norphlet; district 10, at Hope.

Terracing Demonstration Attracts Nevada Farmers

The terracing demonstration being put on for the rest of this week on the farm of Charlie Grimes in Nevada county, is attracting farmers from many adjoining counties as well as those from Nevada, reports J. L. Hill, county agent.

The demonstration is being put on by the Adams Road Machinery Co. and the International Harvester Co., who are supplying the machinery. Excellent work is being done under the conditions, and the system as made possible by the offer of the Rural Rehabilitation Corporation to place one of these units in any county that will contract to have 1000 acres terraced, should be particularly appealing to large landowners who must hire all their terracing work done.

Mr. Rushing, who is in charge of the work, states that the demonstration will continue the remainder of this week, and then the unit will be shipped to whatever county contracts sufficient acreage to be terraced to warrant its use. It is hoped that every land owner who needs to have terracing on his farm, and that would have to hire such work done, will see this demonstration while it is available.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—(P)—Charles Amy, Missouri Pacific fireman at Gurdon, Ark., was injured fatally at Haskell Thursday when he fell from a freight train locomotive as he leaned from the cab to take orders from the station agent.

"Prince" Divorce Framer

A new chapter in the story of "Prince" Mike Romanoff, one-time Midwestern pants presser, was written when Mrs. Wilma E. Gould charged that the noted pouter was the gay Lothario in a plot to dope and "frame" her in a misconduct episode so her wealthy manufacturer husband, Edward Gould, could sue for divorce.

Mrs. Gould said "Prince" Mike appeared above as they appeared in the New York court where she is suing for $500,000 damages.

The opening games were witnessed by a large crowd. The balance of the tournament will be played Friday and Saturday.

Arkansas Senator, Under Observation, Reported Resting Well

Hospital attaches said she was "comfortable" and friends declared her condition was not serious.

Futrell Outlines Probe of Colony

Governor Recalls Incident, and That Guilty Persons Were "Fired"

LITTLE ROCK.—So far as the governor knows, he said Thursday, the investigation of the Dyess relief colony in Mississippi county amounted to this:

"A man came to my office last fall and told me of certain irregularities which he said were going on in Dyess Colony. I don't recall his name, but I understand he was formerly employed in the colony and had been discharged.

"I asked him if he would sign a statement containing his charges. He said he would. I dictated to a stenographer what he had told me, and he read it and approved it.

"I sent it to Dyess, and told him I thought he should investigate the charges. He said he would. I asked for no report, and if he sent me one, I don't recall having seen it.

"But he did tell me personally later that he had investigated the charges, found them true, and had discharged the persons implicated. That, so far as I know, was the extent of the investigation."

The governor, kept at home by a slight illness, issued a prepared statement on the relief situation in which he pointed out that the federal government has expended in Arkansas under the present program, the CWA program a total of $15,135,502, of $26 for every man, woman and child in the state.

A. F. of L. Dissatisfied With NALB's Handling of Elections

DETROIT, Mich.—(P)—Francis J. Dillon, American Federation of Labor organizer, announced Friday that a strike vote had been called for among the 176 locals in the motor car industry.

"The vote, he said, will be in protest against the procedure of the National Automobile Labor Board, which has been holding collective bargaining elections in the industry.

Congress Attacks Rule in U. S. Isles

Ickes' Administration of Virgin Islands Bitterly Flayed

WASHINGTON—(P)—A senate committee took steps Thursday to investigate charges by a former New Deal employee that the Virgin Islands, under the administration of Gov. Paul M. Pearson and the Interior Department, was the abode of "an oppressed people under the American flag."

The senate territories committee voted unanimously that the senate authorize an inquiry into the charges of Paul Yates, former administrative assistant to Pearson. Pearson's administration, he asserted, was "wasteful, extravagant, inefficient and tainted with corruption."

Secretary Ickes, labeled by Yates as "drunk with political power" when told of the proposed inquiry, said: "It's perfectly all right with me."

He added that it was "news to me" that he would dismiss Pearson in order to forestall an investigation, as predicted in a Virgin Island newspaper opposed to the Pearson regime.

Pearson, at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, likewise announced that "we welcome an investigation."

"We know that Senator Tydings, chairman of the territories committee, and his associates are interested only in facts," he said, "and that they believe in fair play."

Yates, in a 48-page communication to the committee, charged the Interior Department was afraid of any thorough congressional inquiry into island conditions, and affirmed:

"I state it as my opinion that the Secretary of Interior is drunk with political power and is using any medium of publicity at his command to malign and attempt to cast into disrepute every public official and every influential citizen who opposes his arbitrary and ill-advised policies."

Huskey Named on Allotment Board

Hempstead Farmer Assigned to State Cotton Acreage Office

H. H. Huskey, well known Hempstead county farmer, has been appointed a member of the state allotment board for administration of the Bankhead Act.

Work will begin in about two months. Mr. Huskey has been assigned to an office in the postoffice building at Little Rock, in conjunction with the agricultural extension work.

He has been connected with the cotton acreage reduction program in Hempstead county, as a member of the county committee, for the last two years, and will serve both the county and state in a similar manner as member of the state allotment board.

THE NEW DEAL

IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Many men hate Secretary Harold Ickes, but many more hate Louis Glavis and hate him worse.

When the enemies of Ickes went after his scalp recently, President Roosevelt took one look at that motley gang, shuddered, and quickly spread the word that he was backing "Honest Harold" to the hilt. But the underdog effort to "get" Glavis still goes on.

Crooks and their political friends, agents of large oil companies, lobbyists, dismissed PWA employees, co-operators, and kickback grafters lead the venal pack. Glavis has caused them an amazing amount of trouble.

Chief of the Ickes army of investigators, Glavis was charged with keeping PWA, the oil industry, the Indian Service, Subsistence Homesteads, and no end of other things strictly "honest."

He has just been dragged into the limelight by a senate resolution calling for any Glavis files having to do with Postmaster General Jim Farley.

He Lands Big Game

Glavis is a gentle, wide-eyed, bald-headed, tall, middle-aged fellow who speaks very softly and seems constantly amazed at all the things people try to get away with. His exposures of dishonesty in high places have been making headline history for years.

The Billinger-Hearst Mexican, document and Teapot Dome scandals are among his fields of triumph. He is an able lawyer as well as a super-shuffler. While big oil companies were hollering loudest about "hot oil" and the little fellows, Glavis discovered that they themselves were buying "hot

Barnes Executed for Taxi Murder

One Son Also Awaiting Execution, and Another to Stand Trial

TUCKER PRISON FARM, Ark.—(P)—Frank Barnes, 50, died in the electric chair Friday morning for the slaying of C. A. Martin, young Blytheville (Ark.) taxi-driver, last July.

Barnes went to his death calmly. Barnes' only request on the eve of his scheduled execution was that a minister be sent to his cell, prison officials said.

Barnes Wednesday was placed in a cell adjoining another in the death house in which his 21-year-old son, Bill Barnes, is awaiting execution. In the cell with young Barnes was Mark H. Shank, Akron, Ohio, attorney condemned to die for the poison murder of Alvin Colby.

While Bill Barnes' appeal is pending in the state supreme court, the tribunal refused to receive an appeal from the elder Barnes and Governor Futrell declined to extend clemency.

Another son, Archie, 24, is awaiting trial in connection with Martin's slaying. The young taxi-driver was fatally beaten with a steel rod and left dying in a field near Blytheville. The state contended that robbery was the motive.

Stable Owners Demand Larger Purses--Commission Meet Called

The stable owners demand larger purses from the Oaklawn Jockey club, where the 31-day racing meet is in progress.

Relief Cut Off

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Calling attention to the liberality with which the federal government has contributed to Arkansas' relief, Governor Futrell Thursday night criticized the legislature for its denunciation of emergency relief and urged that a more appreciative spirit be shown by the general assembly.

His statement followed announcement by Assistant State Relief Administrator Floyd Sharp that he had ordered county administrators not to make work assignments for March because no definite commitments for relief had been made from Washington.

He said instruction would be given the county administrators later.

The governor said the federal government has expended $33,835,502 in Arkansas since relief started, without the state contributing a dollar itself which has caused complaint from other states that Arkansas is

"oil" at about half the fair price. You never heard anything about it, but Glavis raised the devil with them. Once he got an indictment against the big Gulf Oil (Mellon) company in Philadelphia for alleged violation of oil code labor provisions.

His insistence on examining certain oil contracts also has brought a great roar from an industry which says its records are secret.

Glavis got the evidence and indictment which convicted Governor Langford of North Dakota of soliciting campaign funds from federal employees. He is now investigating similar cases which involve Democratic politicians.

The other day a prominent Massachusetts politician fell into the toils because Glavis proved he had grafted on CWA—another Glavis field.

All Teacher Aid Ended as March Allotment Fails

Only Rural Rehabilitation Is Functioning Friday, March 1

NEW ELECTION BILL

Legislature Quiet as U. S. Withdraws Its 100% Financial Help

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—In the absence of any direct advice from Washington, State Emergency Relief Headquarters here Friday stood by its announcement Thursday that the relief programs in this state, including federal teacher aid, had been halted effective Friday morning.

Instructions to not make any work assignments or definite commitments were sent to all county relief headquarters Friday by Floyd Sharp, assistant state administrator.

W. R. Dyess, relief director for Arkansas, is in Washington to confer with FERA officials.

Rural Work Only

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Continuation of the rural rehabilitation phase of emergency relief was authorized late Friday by Floyd Sharp, state ERA executive secretary, but all other forms of relief in Arkansas, including federal teacher aid, were at a standstill due to the failure of state headquarters to receive its March allotment from Washington or any direct advice from the bureau.

New Election Bill

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The house Friday quickly passed, without dissent, a new pure election bill by Mrs. Ella Hurst, of Washington county, and others.

The bill incorporates all the terms of the original bill passed a month ago and sent to the senate where an amendment requiring poll tax receipts for two years to vote was adopted.

The house refused to concur in that amendment and the senate refused to recede from it, resulting in a deadlock between the houses over that measure.

The house Friday also passed a bill to transfer the old state penitentiary "walls" to the State Highway Commission for use as its motor vehicle repair department. The bill also appropriates $25,000 from the highway department to the State Penal Board in payment for the property. The money is to be used in erecting needed buildings at Tucker State Prison Farm.

After the committee on revenue and taxation had failed to report on the Hall sales tax bill, Speaker Thorn said the measure would not come up Friday.

Meanwhile the senate passed five bills during the morning session.

Science Begins Curing Retina Detachment

Among the most serious of the conditions which may affect the human eye is detachment of the retina.

The retina is a tissue at the back of the eyeball, which apparently receives the images focused upon it by the lens of the eye and passes them to the optic nerve, so that they will be suitably recorded by the brain. Under certain circumstances, this tissue may become detached, which results promptly in loss of vision.

Recently two New York investigators have discussed the results of an operation performed in 150 cases for the cure of detachment of the retina. This operative procedure is a great advance in medical art, because previously there was thought to be no hope for such cases and most of them passed on to permanent blindness.

This condition usually affects men slightly more than women, to the extent of about 60 per cent of males and 40 per cent of females. Usually it affects older rather than younger people, but a case has been recorded in a child 5 years old. The average age is 40 years.

Cases of detachment of the retina also are recorded in persons as old as 75. In a considerable number of cases, detachment of the retina seems to follow an injury of some sort. One case is reported in which the retina seems to follow an injury of some sort. One case is reported in which the retina seems to follow an injury of some sort.

Most of the operative procedure now used involve application of chemical cauterizing substances, or else application of heat for purpose of cauterization. The subsequent scarring causes the retina again to become attached to the field in which it should lie.

The New York observers operated on 155 eyes. The condition was either improved or cured in 47.8 per cent, and failure resulted in 52.2 per cent. This obviously is a great advance over the previous situation in which blindness almost inevitably resulted from detachment of the retina.

Even after successful operations, there was temporarily some impairment of the field of vision. The greater the amount of detachment of the retina, the less was the likelihood of complete recovery.

More and more modern scientific surgery is finding opportunity to aid some of the intractable afflictions of mankind. Such diseases are pernicious anemia and Addison's disease, formerly invariably fatal, are now being brought under control. The existence of cancer, surgeons have been able to remove successfully an entire lung or one-half of the brain.

Operations performed upon the eyes are among the most delicate of all procedures carried out by the modern surgeon, and yet today sight is being saved for a tremendous number of people by use of these methods.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

The $24 Lot That Is Still Going Up

That famous transaction whereby the Dutch bought the island of Manhattan for $24 worth of beads, hand mirrors and assorted bits of trinkets is one of those things that people will never stop talking about.

It has served as the basis for innumerable real estate sales arguments and innumerable jokes; and it helps, now, to introduce "The Golden Earth," by Arthur Pound—a colorful book which reviews the real estate history of Manhattan and gives a rather frightening example of the way in which human activities can pave a street with solid gold.

Manhattan's real estate boom, as Mr. Pound points out, was slow in getting started. As late as the American Revolution, its values were enjoying only a slow moderate rise. Not until the Erie canal assured New York's preeminence as a seaport did the boom really get under way.

Events all over the world conspired to increase the island's landed wealth. As Mr. Pound remarks, every business transaction on the globe operated, eventually, to add a few dollars to the value of Manhattan's surface.

Depressions came periodically to check the boom, but things always picked up sooner or later, and Mr. Pound believes they will do so in this depression.

To be sure, Manhattan's population is now in decline; but a proper plan, exploiting the potentialities of skyscraper, subway and street traffic in the right way, could reverse this trend.

Short of the sky itself, there seems no logical limit to Manhattan's land boom.

Published by Macmillan, this book sells for $3.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Spanking Hurts Mind More Than Flesh

Mrs. John S. Reilly of New York says that spanking children keeps them from growing into adults.

What do you think? Perhaps no one cares what I think, but I am going to say it anyhow. I may keep them from growing into adults, but it won't keep them from turning into liars and cheats. A child eternally whipped for offenses will not be long learning the craft of the Artful Dodger.

If he does not learn evasion and subterfuge there are other turns for him to take. He may turn coward and live a miserable life under repressions.

One is not surprised, however, at the revolt of the disciples of discipline. It was to be expected. The liberty theme preached by extremists for the decade and more, combined with the influence of a world clamoring for more license and the resentment of youth at having its style hampered, all have produced a crisis.

Justified by Events Mrs. Reilly and other mothers who note the growing tendency to overstep the mark are justified in throwing a bomb-shell into the complacent attitude of many of today's parents. However, a study of the courts and of the classes who have depended entirely on the cat-o-nine-tails methods of rearing children will substantiate what I have said. Whippings now and then may be and likely are necessary to bring the recalcitrant to time; but they will never take the place of a real knowledge of child nature, confidence between parent and child and sympathetic companionship—sympathy, not maudlin, over-emotional or blind.

We all know homes where the children are trounced for everything they do. Usually the children are either little scamps so accustomed to punishment they do as they please anyway or they are slinking, quiet down-looking tragedies known as "good" children because they are afraid to move.

Source of Mental Instability For years educators as well as doctors of the insane have been trying to reach parents on the matter of inferiority and fear. They have been trying to reduce the rapidly growing number of adolescent and adult incidence between parent and child and sympathetic companionship—sympathy, not maudlin, over-emotional or blind.

On the other hand it does not follow that the other extreme of permission and humoring will not cause trouble too. It does, as a matter of fact. There is no remedy in any extreme.

Obedience Must Be Required A sensible mother will demand obedience, sometimes qualified, sometimes unqualified—straight from the shoulder without undue explanations. She should look behind motives as often as possible. She should know her child and something of his mind. She should know that certain traits are natural to a certain age and cannot be classed as crimes or faults.

The very best children I have known never felt the worst side of a rule brush. Authority, real authority, begins in another way and carries itself along. For some time now there has been too much laxity in regimenting children—little doubt of it, but let us not go back to the dark ages when children were ruled by fear entirely. There is little gain there indeed.

Brian, now home after two years in Paris, ready to take his place in the mill.

ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to capture Brian. He sees him with Gale and is furious. Convinced to meet Gale, she tells her that she (Vicky) and Brian are engaged to be married. Gale, believing Brian has been amusing himself at her expense, is deeply hurt. She refuses to see him again.

Gale goes to a dance with Steve. Phil is there and bursts into a denunciation of the mill bosses. Next day he is dead.

MARY CASHIN and her two children are evicted from their home and Gale takes them in.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVIII

VICKY THATCHER closed the door behind her. She stood there for an instant—a picture in the frock of flame color against the ivory door.

She said to the young man waiting, "Are you surprised to see me?"

"Why, yes, rather," Brian told her. "I thought your father wanted to see me. They told me there was a message."

Vicky crossed the room. "The message said Father wanted to see you here," she informed him. "I know all about it. I ought to—because I sent it."

"You sent the message? But why?"

"Because I wanted to be sure you'd come," Vicky went on. "It's been such a long time since you've been here, Brian. Almost ages. And you're never at the club any more."

"I've been busy."

"Really?"

"Well—yes. And that crowd at the club sort of gets on my nerves."

"Let's sit down," Vicky said. She put a hand on his arm and led him to the davenport. "Now then—cigaret?"

There was a bowl of frezias on the table across the room and the fragrance of the flowers came to them. Vicky held the silver box toward Brian and he took a cigarette. She helped herself. When the two cigarettes were glowing she said quietly, "So it's just as I thought."

"I suppose so," the girl said, "but I don't want it to happen to you. I couldn't stand that. You've done so many things for me and—well, I just thought if there was any way I could help I wanted to."

Brian covered her hand with his. "You're a sweet kid, Vicky," he said. "You wouldn't let a fellow down, would you?"

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing, nothing at all—only I think you're one of the squarest, sweetest girls in the world. I think you're great and I'm glad you asked me to come over tonight. You're right about it—I've been staying too much by myself. Moping. From now on it's going to be different. You and I are going to have fun together."

TWO hours later Vicky knocked on the door of her father's bedroom. Robert Thatcher called, "Come in!"

Vicky pushed the door open. She wore a dressing gown of gold satin with a froth of lace about the neck. Her sandals were nothing more than jeweled straps. Vicky came into the room, trailing the long dressing gown behind her.

Her father looked up from the book he was reading. He said, "Home early, aren't you?"

"I've been home all evening. Brian was here."

"Oh—Brian!" Thatcher looked pleased. He put the book aside, smiled up at his daughter.

Vicky went on, "I'm driving over to Hamilton with him to dinner tomorrow evening. And Saturday, we're going to the Eldredges' dance. Sunday we're going to look up some friends of his in Brookfield."

"Well, that's fine."

Vicky lingered. She said, "Your birthday is next month. Isn't it? I was thinking about a birthday present for you and wondering how you'd like it."

"Now, Vicky, you know I don't care much about presents. There isn't anything I want."

"But this is a sort of special present," she persisted, smiling faintly. "Something you've never had. I was wondering how you'd like to have a—son-in-law."

"You mean—Brian?"

Vicky nodded. There was a light in her eyes that was eager and at the same time assured. "I'm sure he'll propose by that time," she went on softly. "He might have tonight, only I wouldn't let him. I don't want to hurry things too much. It's better to let him worry a little."

Thatcher was beaming. "Smart girl!" he said. "Vicky, there's nothing in the world that would please me more. It's the marriage I've hoped you'd make. If you marry Brian I'll give you the finest trousseau money can buy. I'll give you anything you want for a wedding present. Anything!"

A shrewd look came into the girl's face. "Anything," she repeated. "Is that a promise?"

"Yes."

Vicky moved toward the door. "Don't forget," she said softly. "And you'd better be prepared to keep it."

Gale and Josie Gridley sat on the couch in the women's cloak room. It was noon and most of the mill employees were in the cafeteria, but Gale and Josie had brought lunches from home. They had finished their sandwiches and now sat waiting for the bell to ring.

Josie said, "But you can't keep Mary and those two children. With Phil out of work you can't do it!"

"They'll stay the rest of the week. After that they're going to Mary's cousin. I don't know how long she can keep them. It's dreadful, isn't it—not even having a roof over your head?"

"It's Fisher's fault!" Josie said vehemently. "He could have kept Mary on if he'd wanted to."

"I certainly wish he'd give her her job back."

"Well, he won't! You know that as well as I do. Firing more all the time—that's what they're doing instead of taking anyone on. Do you know what I think? I think they put Mary out of her house to scare the rest of us. Hawleys got a notice this morning; did you know that? And there's lots of others whose rent is back. I think they're trying to scare us all, but it isn't working that way. Oh, there may be some who fall for it—but you know about the meeting tonight, don't you?"

Gale nodded. "Yes."

"Are you going?"

"Yes," Gale said. "I am. I didn't think this organization meant much until I saw what happened to Mary yesterday. Phil's talked about it a lot but—well, there doesn't seem to be any other way now. We've got to stand up for each other. The bosses do treat us like slaves and they think we haven't any rights. I'm tired of having my pay cut for being late when I haven't been. And I'm tired of working twice as hard as we used to for less money."

"Good for you!" Josie's face was shining, eager. "I'm getting everybody I can to go. It's a protest meeting, you know, about these evictions."

There was a sound across the room. Josie's words died on her lips and both girls sat motionless. The sound was repeated and then a head appeared from behind a door of lockers. A head that was light brown, set in glossy waves. A moment more and a figure emerged. It was Leota Rollet!

Leota said, smiling, "Hello." Josie answered, "Hello, Leota," and got to her feet. She said, "Come on, Gale. It's time we were going."

Outside the door the two girls faced each other. Both asked the same question: "Do you think she heard?"

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Care of the eyebrows by no means is one of the least important steps in a woman's daily beauty routine. The brows are frames for the eyes and, unless they are properly shaped, the upper part of the face is apt to look neglected.

Remember, however, that it is just as bad to tweeze your eyebrows into pencil-thin lines that have no particular shape as it is to forget them entirely. The days when it was smart to pluck them until only about ten hairs remained on each side are gone forever. Now the most expertly turned-out woman remove only the hairs across the bridge of the nose, the ones that grow too far downward on the lids and those which refuse to stay down in smooth, neat fashion.

The easiest way to care for eyebrows is to give them a little daily attention. Instead of waiting until dozens of hairs show in the wrong places, are your tweezers for a moment each morning. If you want to do a quick, thorough job that is practically painless, get yourself a pair of the new tweezers that look like manicure scissors.

With a handle that is easy to grasp with either hand the tweezers do not

For the little poem that points a way
To the joy we all may find;
For the soft refrain that has lulled
The pain of a cold and aching mind;
For the distant glimpse of the sunlit
hills
Thru a dusky street of town;
For the hues that fly to the Western sky when the sun is going down;
For the sweet surprise or the bit of cheer
That has flashed across my way—
Just the little things that a moment brings I will give my thanks to-

Peter Unmasks Falsehood

The story of Ananias and Sapphira has taken rather firm hold in human interest. It is unfortunately true that mankind is wont to take a more apparent interest in a great liar than in a great truth teller, though I suppose it is not quite true that mankind is more interested in falsehood than in truth.

People refer to a great liar today as an "Annanias," though Ananias was something more than a liar. The fact is that Ananias is perhaps more closely related to most persons than they realize, because his deep sin was not in telling an untruth, but in professing to be something that he was not and to be doing something that he was not doing.

A wave of fine social enthusiasm has swept over these latter Christians, destroying distinctions of wealth and rank, making those who were well-to-do ready to minister to the needs of those who lacked—a sort of Christian communism, very noble for those like Barnabas, who could enter into it earnestly and sincerely, but difficult for those whose souls were not purified and enriched with the spirit of selflessness.

The tendency in all such situations is for the few to become dominant and exacting in such way that individuals who have not undergone the necessary experience that enables them to respond naturally and sincerely are, nevertheless, too weak to express their dissent.

So they profess to live according to the ideal while the reality of their lives is very different.

Thus it was that Ananias and Sapphira, his wife, possessed property, did not say as Peter said to them, "We are not willing to give all this as others are giving." Instead, they professed to be giving it all, but they actually kept back part of the price.

They came laying their gifts at the apostle's feet, professing to yield their all, where they were withholding much for themselves.

The condemnation in our lesson was not because they did not give it up, but because, as Peter said to them, they had lied to the Holy Spirit. The property was theirs; while they had it, it was in their power. But when they professed to give it to purposes of the church and kept it for themselves, it became a different matter.

The unholiness of holy things is further illustrated in the story of Peter and Simon Magus—a man who was not a saint at heart, but a magician who desired to have the power that he saw the apostles exercising, and who imagined that it could be bought with money.

The sin of this Simon the magician was the sin of those who try to commercialize religion, who take the holy things that ought to be above all self-interest and profit and turn them to their own base ends.

Against all such Annaniases and Sapphiras and Simons, one must set the beauty and integrity of Christian character and action, the beauty of supreme and self-sacrificing devotion. The height and glory of the Christian witness must never be compromised by regard for those who fail to live up to their profession.

It is not by the failure of men, by their weaknesses and hypocrisies, that we should judge the truth and the Christian ideal, but by the triumphant living of those who measure up to the supreme test.

Mill Boys Rise to Political Power

One Carolinian Becomes Congressman, and Another Is Governor

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(AP)—As an over-alled boy of 13 amid the deafening hum of cotton mill machinery, Olin D. Johnson dreamed dreams.

In the same plant, John C. Taylor, five years older, had aspirations of his own.

Now they are living them. Taylor is in congress and Johnson this month became the youngest governor South Carolina has had in many generations.

Both the mill families, the 39-year-old governor and the 44-year-old congressman started earning their living in the Chiquola mill at Honea Path, S. C.

They educated themselves as they toiled. Having gained elementary education, both went to the University of South Carolina, Taylor finding employment as a night watchman and Johnson doing odd jobs about the campus.

Both Were In Army
The World war interrupted their education. Both enlisted in the army in 1917, and Johnson, a sergeant in the Forty-second (Rainbow) division, was a hero for bravery under fire.

After the armistice, they returned to the university and were graduated—Taylor in 1920 at the age of 29, just nine years after he entered a school room for the first time, and Johnson in 1924 at the same age.

John and I had a set of 26 looms each in the weave shop," Johnson recalls. "We worked together off and on for two or three years."

"It was there, as a boy of 13, that I determined I was going to be governor and I planned my whole life for that."

He made his first bid for the governorship in 1930. Although he entered the campaign virtually unknown, he lacked only 906 votes of obtaining the democratic nomination in the primary of that year.

Last fall he tried again and was swept into office over a field of seven older opponents, including the veteran firebrand, Col. L. Blease, former governor and United States senator.

Do Not Forget Mill Towns
Taylor blazed his political trail two years earlier when he was elected to congress from the third South Carolina district.

With all of their political triumphs, Johnson and Taylor retain close touch with the mill villages.

Taylor, who first worked in the mill as a sweeper at the age of eight, has a brother, a sister and several other relatives who work at Honea Path.

And if you want to learn more about Johnson, go to the mill town and talk with Paul Johnston, the local barber. He's a brother of the governor.

U. of A. Team to Play Texas A.&M.

Two Victories Needed to Give Razorbacks Tie for Championship

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—With their chances of winning or tying for the Southwest Conference basketball championship hanging on the outcome of this week-end's competition, the University of Arkansas Razorbacks will conclude their season with a two-game series with Texas A. & M. here Friday and Saturday nights.

The Razorbacks, now in second place a half game behind the pace-setting Southern Methodist Mustangs can win the title if they sweep the series against the Cadets, and the Mustangs lose to Texas Christian and Rice drops its game to the Texas Longhorns.

A tie for the championship is assured the Razorbacks if they win both games and SMU and Rice are victorious in their contests.

Whether the Razorbacks can down the Aggie quintet twice in a row is a matter for speculation, especially so since the Red and White lost the services of Captain Fatt Moody last week. Moody was the team's leading scorer and an important cog in the team's defense.

The Aggies have gained the reputation of being an "in-and-out" aggregation despite their fine showing during the early stages of the season. After gaining championship consideration in the first days of the conference campaign, the Cadets faltered and now have dropped below .500 in the win and loss columns.

Coch John Reid's team has defeated Texas, Baylor and Texas Christian, but has dropped decisions to Texas, Baylor and TCU, bowing twice to the latter quintet.

Johnnie Davis and Tommy Hutto, forwards are the mainstays of A. & M.'s squad.

Track Records Broken at Spa

Whisking Wins Feature Event Thursday Before Crowd of 4,000

HOT SPRINGS—(AP)—The record for the Oaklawn course, new distance for sprint races at Oaklawn Park, was equalled and then shattered and reshattered Thursday as thoroughbreds turned up a fast track in four of the five dash events.

J. H. Tate's six-year-old chestnut gelding Whisking, covered the distance, which is 165 feet less than six furlongs in 1:09 4-5 to set the lowest mark of the day and win the fifth and feature race.

The former course record of 1:10 4-5, established Wednesday by Pat C., was equalled by Black Peter in the second race, and then broken for the first time by Double Nugget which ran the distance in 1:10 1-5 to win the third race. Sessenach's time of 1:10 3-5 in the fourth bet was one-fifth of a second better than the record established by Pat C.

A bright sun brought out a crowd estimated as more than 4,000, the largest of the week, to watch a parade of second-choice horses flash by the judges' stand as winners. Black Peter

The President at Work

Hey, Hey!

Oh, Mac—

Not so good

Hah!

Eh?

Tch, Tch—

There!

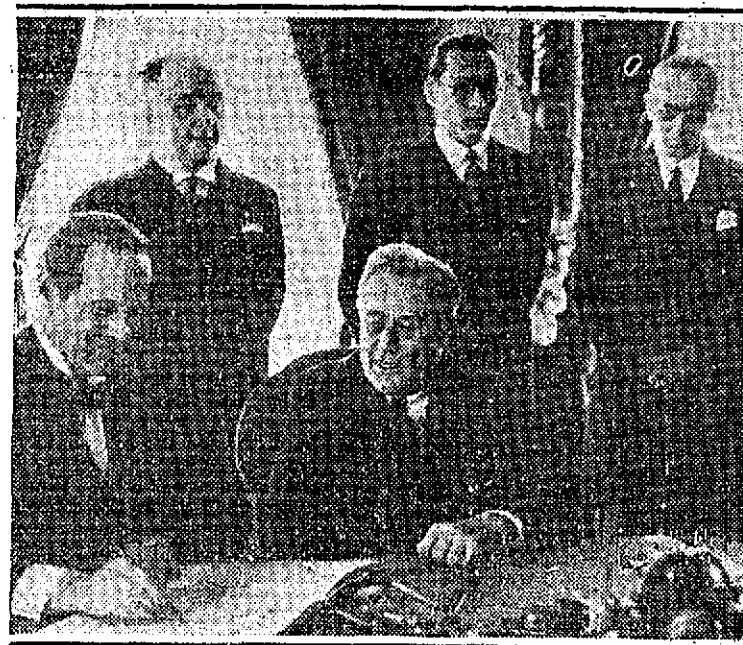

Soberly Intent (Above) on Daily Duties, The President Turns (Below) to Flash His More Familiar Smile Upon Distinguished Callers.

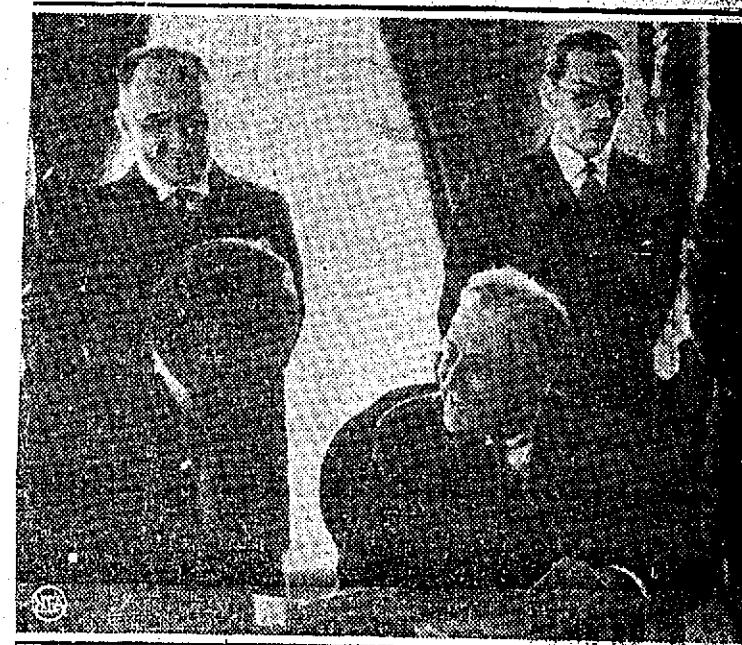

Now he smiles as they enter.

The President closes cordially.

(All Photographs by Thomas D. McAvoy; from NEA Service Inc.; Copyright by Time, The Weekly Newsmagazine).

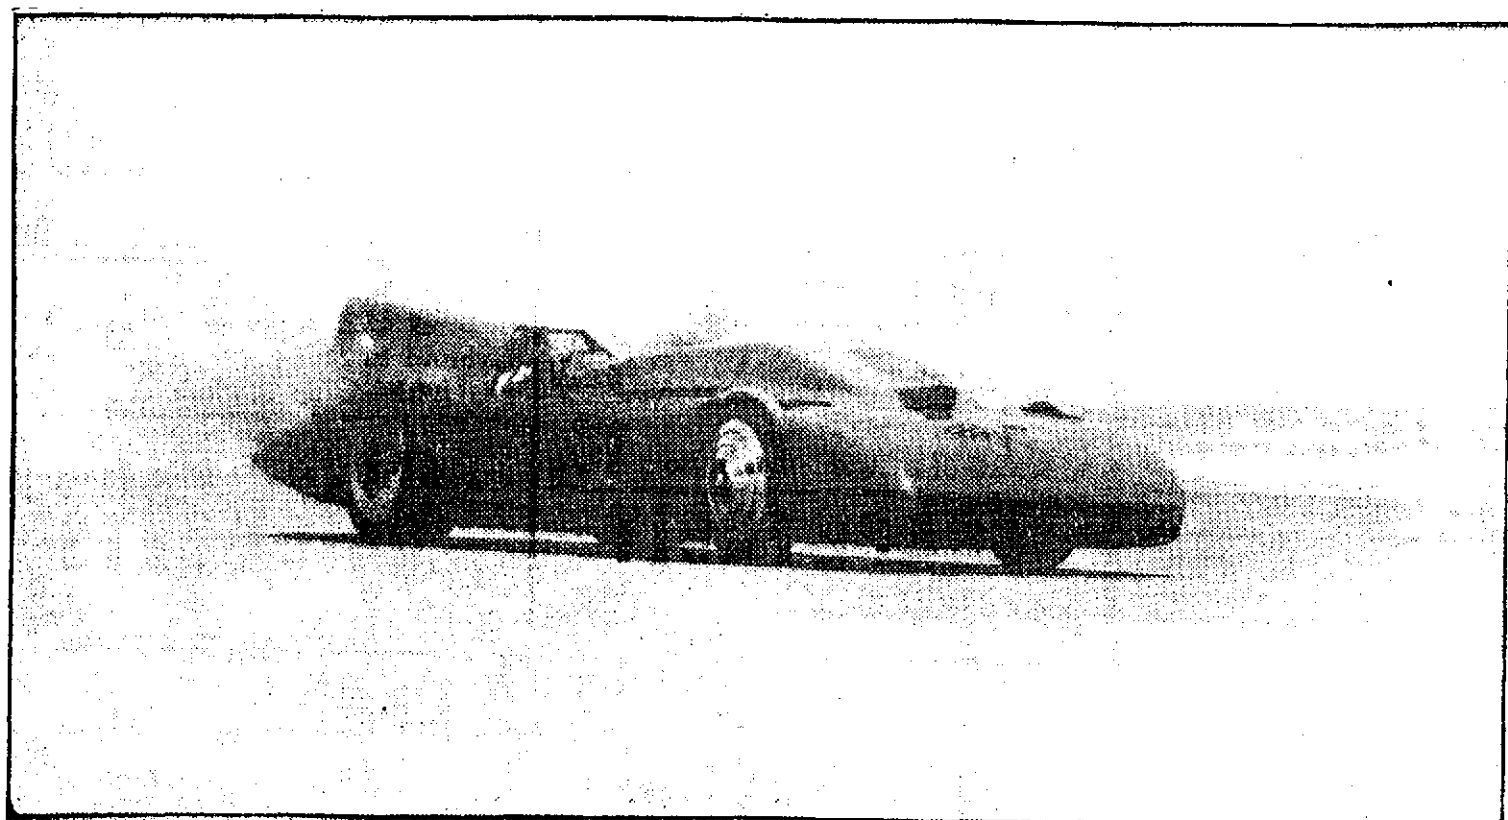

There is the Mr. President you and the whole world know: the charming, gracious gentleman whose smile—flushed with equal warmth upon visiting foreign dignitaries and prize-winning watermelon-growers—has been perpetuated in countless newspaper pictures . . . Then there is Mr. President known to few besides White House attaches: the sober-countenanced, quick-thinking Chief Executive intent upon his daily problems—and upon yours, and yours!—as they come one by one to his desk . . . It is "both" these Presidents, but more particularly the latter, that you see in these remarkable, unposed photos, taken in his White House office on the afternoon that the Brazilian Trade Agreement was signed . . . Awaiting his visitors, the President went on with his work, perusing letters and orders, while loyal Gue Gennrich and Secretary Marvin McIntyre hovered in the background. Ignored was the presence of a photographer, Thomas D. McAvoy, who, employing a tiny camera with film specially sensitized in an ammonia bath, snapped away to get those intimate pictures which are historically valuable because they show the President's "other side." Continuing, Photographer McAvoy recorded the change of expression as Mr. Roosevelt turned the full play of his charm upon his plied callers, Brazil's Ambassador Oswaldo Aranha and Finance Minister Arthur Souza Costa.

Sir Malcolm Campbell 'Tries His Wings' at 200-Mile Clip

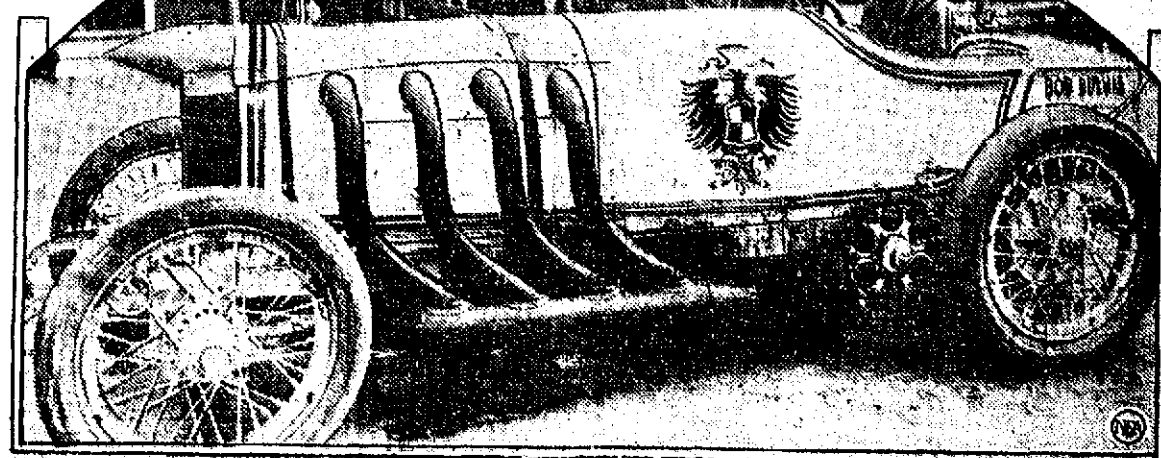

Roaring by at more than 200 miles an hour, Sir Malcolm Campbell's big racing car "Bluebird," with the English speed demon at the wheel, is seen here in a trial spin on the smooth sands of Daytona Beach, Fla. His motor tuned to perfection, Campbell awaited only a glass-smooth beach before attempting to shatter his own world record of 272 miles an hour. He believes his "Bluebird" can be pressed to more than 300 miles an hour.

Picture History of Acceleration at Daytona Beach—1911-1935

Here are two juggernauts of the Daytona Beach, Fla., sands—but with 24 years intervening. That's Sir Malcolm Campbell's rebuilt Bluebird above, newly arrived from England at the world's fastest track along the ocean front. It it powered and streamlined to go 300 miles an hour. Sir Malcolm believes. Below is the Blitzen-Benz which "Wild Bob" Burman, at the wheel, drove 141.73 miles an hour on April 23, 1911. Without stream-lining, with chain drive, clincher tires and a 200-horse-power engine, he set a record which stood for eight years.

Labor in Favor of Compensation Act

Thackery Declares "Only the Lawyers Are Opposed to It"

LITTLE ROCK—H. M. Thackery, secretary of the Arkansas Federation of Labor, was the principal speaker Thursday at the session of the educational institute conducted by the Little Rock Central Trades Council and the Workers Education Bureau of the American Federation of Labor in the council room at the city hall. Mr. Thackery spoke on "Workmen's Compensation."

Mr. Thackery explained House Bill 18, which is before the Arkansas legislature and which would provide a voluntary workmen's compensation law. The bill has been discussed twice recently at open hearings before the House Labor Committee.

"No group in the state is opposed to this measure except a few lawyers whose personal injury cases," Mr. Thackery said. "I don't want to mention names or say that only ambulance chasing lawyers oppose this bill, but labor, employers and all others affected favor its passage."

House Bill 18 provides for a voluntary agreement between employers and employees regarding compensation to be paid in the event an employee is injured. It sets up a prescribed amount to be paid for special injuries. The bill would create a commission to be appointed by the governor, with the approval of the senate, for handling affairs relating to workmen's compensation, Mr. Thackery said.

Intimidation Charged Against Federal Men

BENTON, Ark.—(AP)—Two men described as J. J. McLaughlin of Kansas City, agent for the division of investigation, and T. C. Lambert of Benton, re-employment officer for Saline county, were arrested Thursday on charges of intimidating the plaintiff in a damage suit.

The warrants were issued on complaint of W. F. Henley, who formerly was employed as a workman on the new state hospital near here. He charged that he was injured and is suing Nathan Wohfeld, general contractor at the hospital, for $3000 damages. The suit is set for trial next week.

McLaughlin and Lambert were held under $500 bonds for hearing March 25. The federal officials were said to have come here to investigate suits filed for men claiming they were injured while working on the new hospital.

Should Father Be a Pal? Is Debated

Albert Graves and Rev. Thomas Brewster Speak Before Rotary

A debate over whether a father should be his son's pal or his stern advisor, was staged before the Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Albert Graves, club president and a leader in Boy Scout work, took the position that a man should meet a boy on equal terms in outdoor sports, early inviting him to a man's estate.

The Rev. Thomas Brewster, Presbyterian pastor, took the opposite view, that a man's first duty is to a just and upright and perhaps remote critic of youth—holding that the psychology of the boy and the man are totally different.

Mr. Graves advocated communion between father and son, in sport and life.

The Rev. Mr. Brewster observed, however, that in practice it doesn't work out harmoniously. He quoted the case of a Kentucky father and son who went fishing as "pals." The son got the first nibble—but it was the father who landed on actually landing the fish, "thereby ruining the boy's day," concluded the Rev. Mr. Brewster.

The debate was shot through with humor—since the relations between father and son are a strictly academic issue with the sonless Mr. Graves and the sonless Mr. Brewster. There was some back-biting and no little huckling on the part of the interested audience of Rotarians.

The debate was taken from an outlandish in the Rotarian magazine, and the speakers were careful to explain that they were "following the book" rather than their complete personal feelings. An impartial observer deemed the debate was a draw, with truth, as usual, appearing on both sides.

A. H. Washburn reported on the appearance of a Hope delegation in support of the Hall sales tax bill before the House of Representatives taxation and revenue committee at Little Rock Thursday night. O. A. Graves, counsel for the Hope school district, made the address. He was accompanied by Theo P. Witt and Charles Harrell, members of the school board, and the publisher of The Star.

Wed 12 Years—in Hollywood!

Twelve years of wedded happiness isn't a Hollywood record, but it's at least unusual enough among the film folk to call for notice, so Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd did not lack attention when they celebrated their twelfth anniversary. Shown here in their most recent picture are the noted comedian and Mrs. Lloyd, the former Mildred Davis, who before her marriage appeared with Lloyd in a number of his hits. They have three children—Gloria, 10; Peggy, 9; and Harold, Jr., 4.

Sedition Bill Is Upheld in House

Lower Chamber Refuses to Recall Its Measure From Senate

LITTLE ROCK—The house voted Thursday to "stand by its guns" relative to the Gooch anti-sedition bill, rejecting a motion by Maner of Garland to recall the measure from the senate, where it has been pending since the day after the house passed it, 63 to 12, on February 14. The passage of the bill was 57 to 34.

The motion to recall the anti-sedition bill was opposed by Gooch of Cross, the author. He declared those opposing the measure "simply don't understand it." He added that "this looks like baby play—we would be making monkeys out of ourselves." Gooch said that the bill changes the present laws so that a person convicted of an attempt to overthrow the government could be sent to the penitentiary, whereas now "only a few days in jail is plenty."

Maner, speaking for his resolution said that he believed a majority of those who voted for the bill "did so under a misapprehension." He declared that passage of the bill had "caused this state to get some mighty bad publicity."

Continuing, he said: "They just fooled us and now the state is up in arms over this thing. This bill will mean the defeat of more representatives who voted for it than anything else. It would stop freedom of speech and freedom of the press. We should bring it back from the senate and give it more consideration."

Turnback Faces Defeat

LITTLE ROCK.—The senate refunding committee, meeting at the senate chamber Thursday night, voted to recommend that house Bill 241 by Warfield, to give the county highway fund 75 per cent of highway revenues in excess of $10,000,000, not be passed.

The recommendation was decided upon after the committee read a telegram from T. H. MacDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, in which he said an increase in allotment to the county turnback fund might seriously affect future federal aid allotments to the state and after Senator Johnson explained his reasons for believing passage of the bill would violate the state's refunding contract with bondholders.

Senator Featherston spoke in favor of the bill and sought to offer an amendment to provide that 25 per cent of the surplus over $10,000,000 be used for new construction instead of maintenance.

Mr. MacDonald's telegram follows: "If legislation should increase per cent of revenue received from gasoline tax to go to counties for county highway purposes and require its use exclusively for such purposes, such action apparently could not be construed as a diversion, but would seem to us, in view of recent correspondence concerning ability of state to match federal aid and to maintain state highway system, that it would immediately raise the question of adequacy of provision made by state for carrying out provisions of federal highway act and maintaining roads built with federal funds, which latter question might have more serious results than diversion."
